The adventures of Risky B. Liable

Homeowners insurance

covers damages caused by weather disasters, but not claims caused by floods. Check with your insurance company and make sure what losses caused are covered by your insurance policy and how you can better protect your home.

Loss of use is also covered by Homeowners Insurance, provided the loss has made the home inhabitable. But, as an insured you have the duty to protect your property from further damage, and you are responsible for maintaining it on good condition.

Remember, insurance is not a "pre-paid maintenance program" regardless of what is promised by morning TV or Radio shows, insurance is for "accidents" and/or "acts of God", in other words the UNPREDICTABLE. It will never cover wear, tear and/or deterioration.
